

MATRIMONIAL INFELICITY.

Turn About is Fair Play—A Chapter in Real Life. From the Detroit Free Press, 22d.

For over a year it has been known to many, not only in this city, but throughout the whole length of the lakes, that the well-known captain of a propeller, running from Buffalo to Chicago, had deserted his wife and family, who were residing here. He had married when young, and while at work as a painter, a poor, but honest, virtuous girl. She had shared his poverty, aided him in educating himself, and as the "balm" one after another, were given them, had labored with her own hands to lay out a pittance for a rainy day. Success crowned their united efforts. Fortune smiled upon them, and the once poor painter obtained command of a steamer. His labors were amply rewarded, and a long and happy life lay open to the little family. A pleasant home was purchased, where the captain, when through with the season's labors, could dwell amidst the comforts of home beneath his own vine and fig tree.

But this was to last but a short time. He suddenly found that his wife did not possess that beauty which, though but skin deep, had charms for the captain. He found that she was not as well educated as he might have been, and, forgetting all the assistance she had rendered him in the days they had struggled together against poverty and want—forgetting that to her was due at least a portion of his success—he became discontented, and longed to cast her off, that he might reveal in the charms of some younger and fairer damsel.

In order to give plausibility to his ends, he accused her of having violated her marriage vows, of having granted those favors to others which should always be reserved for the husband; in fact, he denied that he was the father of two of her children. He attempted upon this plea to obtain, under the law of Indiana, a divorce; but for some reason he failed. For the last year he has entirely neglected to provide for his family, and the still loving, though sorrowing wife has been compelled to do washing and other work to keep the wolf from the door. Last winter he became acquainted with a fair and charming girl, not yet out of her teens. He wooed and won her, and after brief courtship married her, and has kept her with him upon his boat all summer.

The captain, blind to all save his love for his second wife, had no thought of the fickleness of women, had no idea that his new love might, like himself, grow tired and weary of the first chosen one, and so did not notice the attentions shown his bride by the porter of his own boat; had he done so, undoubtedly the porter would have been landed in the first port, and his first wife, if possible, to forget him. But love made him blind, and one night, about two weeks ago, the propeller was without a porter and the captain minus a wife. They had eloped together. The fair but frail young girl had departed, leaving the giddy husband of two wives with no one to comfort him in his loneliness. The captain has been paid in his own coin, the tables have been turned upon him, and he should now retire, humble and contrite, to the love of his first wife and children.

THE SOUTH CAROLINA CIVIL RIGHTS BILL.

The following is the full text of the act passed by the Legislature of South Carolina, securing to the freedmen their rights of person and property: An act to declare the rights of persons lately known as slaves, and of free persons of color. "Be it enacted, etc., That all persons hitherto known in law in this State as slaves, or as free persons of color, shall have the right to make and enforce contracts, to sue, be sued, to be affiants and give evidence, to inherit, to purchase, lease, sell, hold, convey, assign, real and personal property, make wills and testaments, and to have full and equal benefit of the rights of personal security, personal liberty, and private property, and of all remedies and proceedings for the enforcement and protection of the same as white persons now have, and shall not be subjected to any other or different punishment, pain, or penalty for the commission of any act or offense, than such as are prescribed for white persons committing like acts or offenses. "Section 2. That all acts and parts of acts specially relating to persons lately slaves and free persons of color, contrary to the provisions of this act, or inconsistent with any of its provisions, be and the same are hereby repealed, provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to repeal so much of the 8th section of an act entitled 'An act to establish and regulate the domestic relations of persons of color, and to amend the law in relation to paupers and vagrancy, ratified the twenty-first day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five,' as enacts that marriages between a white person and a person of color shall be illegal and void."

GENERAL BURNSIDE FOR THE PRESIDENCY.

The New York correspondent of the Hartford Press writes as follows:—"General Burnside, by warmly espousing the Republican cause, has secured for himself a brilliant political future. The following ticket is now talked of for 1870: For President, General Ambrose E. Burnside, of Rhode Island; for Vice-President, General John A. Logan, of Illinois. The East is entitled to the next Presidential candidate, and General Burnside is one of the purest and noblest men in public life. Such a ticket would create immense enthusiasm all over the country, secure the support of the young men, and be triumphantly elected. No better campaign document would be required than Burnside's magnificent letter written after the defeat at Fredericksburg. It will be remembered that the country charged the reverse upon the Administration, and General Halleck especially. Thereupon Burnside wrote a public letter, declaring that he alone was responsible for the disaster."

Arrival of Troops Near Washington.

The arrival of troops in this vicinity has given rise to exaggerated rumors of the intended concentration of a large military force (from twenty-five to thirty thousand) here. The fact is, that the number of soldiers at this point for some months past has averaged only two or three thousand, and that several companies of the 12th Infantry and a few other regular troops have been recently ordered here, the aggregate being less than the usual assignment to headquarters of a department. We presume the whole number in this city and vicinity, when the arrangements are completed, will not exceed 5000 men.—Washington Star.

Death of Bishop Young, of Erie.

Right Rev. J. M. Young, Catholic Bishop of the Diocese of Erie, Pa., who died suddenly in that city on the 16th instant, was 55 years of age, having been born in Seneca, Maine, in the month of August, 1808. Bishop Young served a regular apprenticeship at the printing business at Portland, Maine, in the office of the Portland Argus. He was a convert to Catholicism at the age of 19, and at the age of 22 took a journey to St. Louis through the Western States, finally stopping at Cincinnati, where his extensive reading and marked ability for one of his age attracted the attention of the then Bishop of Cincinnati, and he was sent to St. Mary's College, at Emmetsburg, Md., to complete his education and prepare himself for ordination. He was ordained priest in 1837. First appointed Bishop of Pittsburgh, but upon his designation of that office he was appointed Bishop of Erie, as the successor to Bishop O'Connor. He was consecrated in Cincinnati on Low Sunday, in 1854, coming to Erie shortly after, where he has resided ever since. His bearing, benevolent disposition, and social qualities made him highly esteemed by his contemporaries as a man, a scholar, and a gentleman. His death, although almost instantaneous, was scarcely unexpected by him, as he had frequently been informed by his medical advisers that, sooner or later, he would die without warning, in consequence of a disease of the heart, to which he had been subject for some time.

John Forsyth, editor of the Mobile Register.

John Forsyth, editor of the Mobile Register, who was a delegate to the first Philadelphia Convention, and is present traveling through the North, writes in his paper as follows:—"The struggle will be here at the North. It is our part at the South to keep quiet and let the North fight it out on this line."
